Men can cook. Only if they want to.
Not because they have to. Food can be brought to the table anyway. But how does one ask the men to cook?
Give them some good reasons to do so!

About the Authors:

Laxmi Dhaul, a Mumbai-based writer is involved in setting up renewable power plants using agricultural waste.

Gitanjali Khanna has taught in schools in Mumbai and Dubai. She has worked with Laxmi Dhaul and Mario Miranda before.

A Guide for Gentlemen Chefs is a humorous attempt to categorise recipes—Indian, Western and Continental—not on the basis of their ingredients or modes of preparation, but according to the various categories created by ‘Gentlemen Chefs’. Each category contains a tongue-in-cheek verse, ‘appropriate’ recipes, and a subtly humorous cartoon by one of India’s most renowned cartoonists, the inimitable Mario Miranda.

Mario Miranda is a renowned Indian cartoonist who has contributed to The Illustrated Weekly of India. After studying in St Xavier’s College, Mumbai and Portugal, Mario spent several years working in the UK. He has exhibited his cartoons around the world.
