- This is a book of contemplative essays and art photographs.
- It gives the reader the experience of the city of Bombay/ Mumbai with its pungent edginess, its geography, teeming personal histories, evidence of ruin and new rooting, its pulsing and often putrid corporality.
- It is a cross genre book dipping into memoir, travelogue, investigation and poetic reflection.
- Through vivid and poignant stories encountered on its streets and in little known trades, delving into its history and Bollywood's branching requirements, visiting relatively unexplored precincts and the atmospherics of high-rises and heritage villages, a map of the city emerges—ephemeral but as memorable as the sun setting over the Arabian sea.
- Conceptually stimulating, elegantly written and accompanied by haunting images, this book is a compassionate, dramatic and in depth take on the life of a cruel and captivating world metropolis even as it is an intense meditation on living in the 21st century.

Authors:

Priya Sarukkai Chabria is a poet, writer and translator. She is the recipient of the Indian Government's Senior Fellowship to Outstanding Artists.

Her books include two poetry collections, a novel and a speculative fiction narrative. Her work is in numerous international journals, websites and various anthologies in India and abroad. Niyogi Books is set to publish her collection of love stories set in Bombay.

Christopher Taylor is an English photographer based in France. A zoologist by training, this self-taught photographer mostly uses a cumbersome studio camera or else an ancient Rolleiflex even in the busiest streets. His photographs never fail to surprise. He has held critically acclaimed exhibitions in Paris, Arles, London, Beijing, Delhi, Mumbai, and Calcutta.
