A fascinating exploration of the three things that make the world go round, Science, Sex, Spirituality delves into the links between physics and metaphysics, as seen through the eyes of a man who desires to understand the universe. Saagar starts his journey as a precocious adolescent who brashly aims to find the Holy Grail of physics—the Theory of Everything. Life, however, takes an unexpected turn that forces him to question its very meaning and purpose. He sees his rock-solid world disappearing into a fog of unknowing, propelling him on a completely new path of self-discovery.

Guided by his guru, Saagar discovers a delightful secret—he gains the knowledge that releases him from his self-perceived limitations. His creative instincts set free, he not only finds the logic of the Unified Field—that soup of creation from which everything emerges—but also reinvents his life. He becomes a famous inventor, whose life and achievements inspire an entire generation. Thought-provoking, humourous and conceptually insightful, this book is a must-read for everyone trying to understand the mystery of life—and beyond.

A self-help book in the form of a novel.

Explores the concepts of Science, Sex, Spirituality and the roles they play in our lives.

Structured in the form of an interview with a famous inventor, it delves into the links between physics and metaphysics—in a mind-altering voyage of self-discovery.

...The world is transitory. It is the nature of this world—what comes must go, and one who is born must also die. In all this coming and going only the soul remains pristine, untouched by birth, death or the living experience. It is the only thing that is permanent in this transient world...

Yuresh Sinha is a practising architect with a career spanning 25 years. His deep interest in sustainable urbanization led him to write his first book, Urban-Shock. He has also co-conceptualized The Kaal Trilogy along with Sangeeta Bahadur, his wife and author of the series.

He is a regular writer on self-motivation, self-improvement, religion, spirituality, dharma, meditation and related subjects for his guru's website. A keen architectural photographer, he has held exhibitions under the title 'Cities in Twilight'. He also finds time for trekking and playing the sarod.

Science, Sex, Spirituality is his first work of fiction. Tinged with some elements of autobiography, it is the distillation of more than 30 years of his exploration into the fascinating world of science, religion and the supernatural.
